Boy Scout Campaign Shows Gratifying Results To Date

Division Chairman Charles M. Salerno States That Practically Every Community in the Addison District Has Reported—Prattsburg Oversubscribes—Avoca 80 Per Cent Ahead of Last Year.

Today and tomoorow mark the half way mark in the simultaneous campaign of the twenty-five communities seeking to secure their respective appointments of the annual budget for the maintenance and operation of the Steuben Area Council, Boy Scouts of America. General Chairman K. E. Plants of Hornell and Division Chairman C. M. Salerno of Addison announced that the program was moving forward just according to schedule. When asked concerning the results they confessed some concern over delayed reports from Bath District but stated that such reports as had been made were indeed gratifying. Practically every community in the Addison division has reported. The Canisteo, Almond, Arkport, and Alfred division are engaged with their solicitation this week.

Division Chairman P. J. Schumacher of Cohocton has his four towns—Cohocton, Atlanta, North Cohocton, Springwater and Wayland—all primed for their effort which will be launched April 2 to 5 inclusive.

Prattsburg oversubscribed their quota of $100 and according to reports will retain the overage for local troop use. Jasper received $69 toward a quota of $50.00. Avoca had not made their goal on Monday but were 80% ahead of last year. Campbell promises their full quota this week. Monterey again pledged their full quota as did Pulteney, Westfield and Elkland. These same communities paid their full quota in 1934.

Hammondsport deferred their campaign until early in April but have pledged the full amount of $210. There were no final figures from Bath and Addison reported at noon on Monday, but it is understood that both towns had exceeded their total subscriptions of 1934. The solicitation will be continued.

Simultaneously with the financial campaign of the council, the largest training school ever conducted is being operated for four Monday nights at Bath. The initial enrollment - a record of 153 - was swelled even bigger on Monday last. The most popular course seems to be the Elements of Scoutmastership conducted by Ray M. Finch of Dansville, although more than 25 men are enrolled in each of the courses directed by Gordon Ridenour, of Horseheads, Harry Somers of Canisteo and John E. Bird of Corning. The Sea Scout Unit has fourteen enrolled in two crews for training.

One question put to the Division Chairman Salerno and local chairman Dr. F. M. Whitmore last week by a very substantial local contributor to the Scout budget, was answered in the first quarterly financial report released this week by Council Treasurer John L. Thomas of Corning. "How much revenue is required each month to operate the council and where did it come from in January, February and March if, as the statement shows the council continues to be free of debt?" Mr. Thomas' report shows that the council ended its last fiscal year, which is is the calendar year, with the small balance of $15.26. Since January 1 the Corning and Painted Post community chest has paid $1755 into the council treasury and the Hornell and North Hornell community chest has paid $876. This just meets the obligations for the first quarter which are under the following budget allowances: Administration $1500, train $500, activities $375, and National $75.

The Comptroller's report shows that during the second quarter of the year the council depends almost wholly on non-chest communities for support. The indications are that during April and May payments from the current financial campaign will be sufficient to meet all operating expenses. The current training sessions at Bath constitutes a major item of expense under the training budget although printed aids and leaders' supplies run annually into the hundreds of dollars.

The local council has been cited recently for recognition by the Regional Office for its program and accomplishments in 1934 and its plan for 1935. The Steuben Area Council is recognized as one of the outstanding rural councils in New York and New Jersey.

It is expected that a small delegation of council officers will attend the Regional meeting at Kingston, N. Y. on April 12 and 13. These officers serve without compensation of any sort and pay all of their own expenses in attendance at local and regional meetings. The council officers are: President, W. H. Curtis of Corning, Vice-President, E. J. Guttinger of Hornell, C. C. Bateman of Dansville, C. W. Prindle of Elkland, and F. W. Parkhurst of Bath, National Representative Fred C. Cameron of Corning, Comptroller Kenneth E. Plants of Hornell, Treasurer John L. Thomas of Corning Commissioner David E. Gray of Corning.

These men are elected annually by representatives from each of the thirty and more communities affiliated with the council. The representatives from Addison are Messrs. Frank Kelly, C. M. Selernus and M. F. Whitmore.

Nelson B. Payne To Take Over American House Next Monday

Widely-Known Addison Hostelry to Be Acquired From Mayor Sisto By Prominent Addison Business Man—New Proprietor Has Had Long and Successful Career in Merchandising and Investment Fields—Return of Mrs. Payne to Renew Eldridge Family Tie.

Possession of the American House, widely-known Addison hostelry, will be acquired from Mayor Angelo Sisto by Nelson B. Payne on Monday next. Negotiations looking to the transfer, in progress for sometime past, were concluded early his week.

Mr. Payne who has had a long and successful business career in merchandising, investment and insurance fields, was for a period of seventeen years credit manager for Clafflin's of New York. In this and other capacities, he has traveled extensively and visited practically all the leading hotels of the United States. He is personally acquainted with many of the leading personalities in metropolitan hotel circles, including Edward S. Statler, Louis Wallick, and Mr. Kinkade, the latter being head of the American Hotels Corporation, greatest of the hotel chains. Mr. Payne has also a wide acquaintance among the many successful and outstanding figures in the smaller communities. He is thoroughly conversant with all phases of the hotel business and as a native and long-time resident of the Southern Tier, his success in his new undertaking should be assured.

Mrs. Payne, who will be associated with her husband in the management of the hotel, is a descendant of Thomas Eldridge, who originally built the American House more than ninety years ago. The hotel remained in the hands of the Eldridge family for over three-quarters of a century, this period including the proprietorship of the late Thomas Harden who was also a member of the Eldridge family. As a girl, Mrs. Payne spent much of her time as a guest of relatives at the American House and her new association with the institution will renew the time-honored tie between the hotel and the Eldridge family.

Under Mr. Sisto's management the hotel has kept pace with the times and it ranks today among the most modern and progressive to be found in a rural community. The Tap Room added last fall, is rated as being unexcelled between Binghamton and Buffalo. The hotel is newly repainted and redecorated and it is expected that numerous new and novel refinements will be added by the new managemnt.

Mr. Payne will maintain his insurance business in his present location next to the First National Bank as heretofore. Mr. Sisto has announced no definite plans for the future.

DUST STORM LESSONS

Out of the example of the past has once more arisen a warning to America that plenty and scarcity chase each other across the horizon of years as surely as the tail follows the comet. Yet with all our expanded sociology and university knowledge we fail to take heed of the warning until the pangs of hunger gnaw our vitals.

As cycle follows cycle through the course of the centuries the "lean kine" keep bobbing insistently up to swallow the "fat kine" which Nature in her abundance supplies profligate man. In spite of the wisdom of Joseph handed down through the years in Biblical records, man feels sufficient unto himself while abundance lasts; wastes foods, denudes fertile land and flounts Nature with egotistical mockery until the cycle turns, the plenty ends and starvation stares everyone in the face.

For seven years the farms of America poured forth their abundant harvests and prices of grain sank to low levels. Did our government take intelligent steps to guard against a catastrophe which recurrent droughts forecast might be upon us? Not at all! We manipulated markets, paid farmers to cease sowing wheat and did every thoughtless thing to check production, except the one move which could have removed danger of famine. Now for four years our farmers in various parts of the country have suffered from droughts of increasing intensity. Our wheat crop, almost a failure last year, through drought and government interference with Nature by the assinine manipulations of Secretary Wallace's AAA, U. S. farmers have been feeding the stock wheat and oats imported from South America. But that is only the beginning of the story. For out across the plains of the middle west there has lately arisen a new scourge—a scourge of winds that licked up fertile soil, gathered it into great black clouds that darkened the horizon, carrying this soil hundreds of miles to scatter no one knows where.

Of all the scourges America has suffered; drought, grasshoppers, blight and flood, this new blast of dust storms is charged with the greatest danger. Why is China plagued with those recurrent famines that take tolls of millions of lives? Because China, denuded of trees and vegetation through large areas, has been blasted by the curse of dust storms which swept away her fertility and leave a great population gasping upon infertile sub-soil.

With American dust storms following close on the wake of droughts and intensifying their affects, no one knows what form of scourge will curse us next. It may be another cloud of locusts, or some new form of pestiferous insect appear to devour the crops. One thing is sure, a little of the wisdom of Joseph could have averted some of the tragedy now facing hundreds of thousands of American farmers.

Had the federal government taken a leaf out of the book of precedent some of this disaster need never have come.

Had the government purchased a billion bushels of wheat outright, put unemployed men at work to build great concrete warehouses for safe storage, then could we have been prepared for this new catastrophe. With that wheat actually taken off the market, its affect on the price would have been removed and American farmers could have enjoyed higher prices for what they grew. And now with starvation facing their cattle these same farmers could repurchase their grain at a price somewhat in line with what they sold it to the government.

SHIFTING OPINION

Once more Mr. Hoover has spoken to condemn the ill-advised experiments of the New Deal, and again Administration leaders have tried to minimize the former President's words by attributing them to desires for a return call to the White House. Yet behind the voices of those trying to defend the New Deal policies is a hollow note partly stubbornness, partly as though the ones shouting were making a loud noise in the attempt to revive their own belief in something which every elapsed month of time has proven to be a pure conglomeration of fallacies.

Probably no President ever attracted so huge a following of voters of all parties as did the second Roosevelt. When he announced his dreams of rebuilding American society to give every forgotten man a big chance, the majority of those followers eagerly waited a marvelous change for the better. When it was found that only mere human beings could be obtained to attempt the fulfillment of the New Deal promises, and that these humans had failings which were quickly incorporated into the machinery of the monstrous contraption that was supposed to give us speedy Reform along with Recovery, some people focused their attention on the weak cogs in the machinery and began criticising particular New Dealers for their Acts. Others began criticising certain of the plans, but for a long time no one had the temerity to actually criticise the President. It was as though he had been elevated to office by great popular demand and no one should question his personal acts or motives.

When Mr. Roosevelt took office and launched the early moves of the New Deal, he stated these were simply experiments, that if they did not work they would be rejected and other things would be tried. That was a fair enough statement, and the general public took him at his word. Unfortunately, both for the entire country and for Mr. Roosevelt, the President has not acted according to that promise. A large share of the New Deal program has proved to be a dismal fallacy that has put a positive brake upon Recovery, instead of advancing it. Yet the Administration has clung to these exploded theories long past the time the general public has ceased to believe in them.

This policy of clinging to unworkable plans has steadily snapped the confidence of many of the citizens who believed most heartily in the policies of the Administration. It is beginning to call forth personal criticism against the President which is pretty sure to roll up into a great snowball of resistance in the next eighteen months. The man in the street who wants a job has become thoroughly sickened of Promises of milleniums. What he Wants is a JOB.

POTATO CONTRACTS

It is unfortunate that potato growers should even consider the proposition of putting their industry under the bargaining clause of the AAA.

The experience of the potato growing industry down through dozens of years should have pointed out to any student of agriculture the great folly of attempting to regulate the potato yield by any system of bargaining and regulation of planting. For of all crops raised in this country none fluctuates more perniciously with every whim of nature, than potatoes. Potatoes may be one dollar a bushel one year, fifteen cents a bushel the next year and three dollars the following, all for no reason men can expect to control through government agencies.

This is a big country and a great many acres of potatoes are planted in it every year. One year drought, heat and insects may come as a scourge over a considerable area of potato lands practically wiping out the crop and sending the price of spuds soaring to the skies. In another year farmers may curtail plantings to an extent because of discouragement over a low price the preceding fall, yet ideal growing weather and other conditions may work to affect the productivity of potatoes and a bumper crop come in spite of shorter planting.

Fluctuation in production per acre of potatoes is so much greater than the average run of farm crops, limitation of yields by government interference with nature is practically doomed to failure in the very beginning. The average yield for wheat over the country may be about 15 bushels per acre and some favorable conditions may cause this to jump to 20 bushels. Or an unfavorable condition may cause the yield to drop to 12 bushels an acre. While this fluctuation is serious enough to weaken or stiffen the price it cannot break the market like the possible fluctuation of potato yields. For a man may plant a ten-acre field to potatoes one year and get 25 bushels to the acre. And he may plant an adjoining ten-acre field the next year and dig 200 bushels to the acre, all because spuds have the productive capacity to yield all the way from nothing to as high as 1600 bushels to the acre.

While the corn farmers are having a headache over their poorly working AAA agreements, the wheat farmers are having the stomach ache over their government contracts, and the southern farmers are watching the foreign markets disappear under AAA control of cotton, their plight is as nothing compared to what the potato farmers might get into by going into a new branch of Secretary Wallace's folly.

Potato farmers who have consistently made money over a span of years follow a prosaic but fairly sure road to success. They plant and take care of a certain number acres of potatoes year in and year out in spite of fair-weather prophecies regarding the possible price of the coming crop. They strike the lean years and the fat years as they come and the fat years make up for the losses of the lean years so their industry and faith in the general price level over a term of years wins them a good return for investments and labor.

As long as spuds are spuds and the yields may vary by such tremendous margins it is useless to attempt to regulate the crop by contracts from Washington. The entire AAA program is falling more in disrepute day after day as farmers discover what a boomerang it can be. For New York farmers to fly in the face of this experience to sign potato contracts is sheer folly. For if wheat, cotton and corn production cannot be regulated to the growers' entire good, then how dismal a job it is to attempt to regulate the production of potatoes, the most irresponsible crop on earth. It is a feast or a famine with the potato grower and no amount of government tinkering can change the growing habits of spuds.

Bath village trustees have called a special election for Tuesday, April 9th, when taxpayers will decide whether to buy the plant of the Bath Water Works Company, a private corporation for the price named in the 60 day option given by the company.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Supervisors and the State Board of Welfare, members of the county board were given the impression that the state was about to adopt legislation which would mean the removal of Pleasant Valley Sanatorium from the county.

ELKLAND—Edward D. Stult announced this week that he will be a candidate for the position of county commissioner and will seek the nomination at the primary to be held in September.

COUDERSPORT— The biggest news of the week is the story of the drilling of the well on the John Ruppert farm in Hebron Township. The well is owned by Penn United and gauged 13,500,000 feet. The lime was found at 5,399, tye sand at 5,325 and it was penetrated in 2 feet.

The Giant Holding Companies

By WALTER LIPPMANN

IN ATTEMPTING to consider the Wheeler-Rayburn bill dealing with the gas and electric industry along with all the other measures now before Congress, I feel much as I should imagine Mr. Dionne would feel if his wife presented him with another set of quintuplets. It is a little hard to give each of these brain children the attention which its importance demands, and, for my part, my chief concern is that Congress and the Administration may be taking on at one time responsibilities as complicated and as difficult to discharge well as those for which the utility holding companies are so justly condemned.

However, the immediate issue is somewhat simplified by the fact that the present controversy has been narrowed to one question. The bill itself covers 178 pages, but the fight just now is centered on the first seventy-seven pages and actually on the six pages devoted to Section 10. The President's message is entirely devoted to this section. Nine-tenths of the public discussion has been devoted to it. It is the part of the bill which calls for the dissolution within five years of certain kinds of utility holding companies. While it seems unlikely to me that this is the most important part of the bill, it is the easiest to understand. The other parts of the bill which regulate the transmission and sale of natural gas and electric energy in interstate commerce are far more complicated and far more debatable.

A holding company is a corporation which owns enough stock in other companies to control their management. There are, I believe, about twenty big ones in the gas and electric industry and they control the bulk of the industry. Some of them are amazing contraptions. There is one system in which there are nine holding companies piled on top of the operating companies, with the result, according to the statement of Representative Rayburn, that $50,000 of stock in the top holding company controls the management of a billion dollars of book value down below. In another system $23,000 of stock at the top controls the operation of another billion of property down below. In still another, the structure was so fantastically complicated that one man was secretary or officer in about 200 corporations within the system. It sounds crazy, but I suppose Mr. Rayburn knows what he is talking about.

No one seriously defends such corporate complexity. Nor does any one seriously deny that such complexity combined with centralized control has led to gross abuses. Thus, for example, the recent memorandum issued by Mr. Philip H. Gadsden for the committee of public utility executives, admits that the charges leveled against these gigantic holding companies are at least partly true in certain instances. Mr. Gadsden's contention is that the evils should be corrected and that they can be corrected without eliminating "the holding companies altogether." He urges that in spite of their abuses they also have advantages: that they achieve economy, that they promote development of the industry by making it easier to raise capital through diversifying the risk, that they favor efficiency through unifying management and, though he does not make the point, through scientific research.

Now, it is not true to say that the bill eliminates "the holding companies altogether." The bill eliminates those which cannot prove within five years that they are "necessary for the operation of a geographically and economically integrated public utility system serving an economic district extending into two or more contiguous states." In other words, the bill strikes at holding companies which control operating companies that cannot be operated as one power system. It forbids a holding company to set up "unified management" of power companies, say, in New England and on the Pacific Coast, because power is not transmitted from coast to coast. The bill permits all the unified management that may be necessary for a power system that is in fact unified. But it demands the dissolution of companies that control scattered and unconnected operating companies.

This is clearly the way the President understands the bill. It is the way it is understood by so honest and able a critic of the bill as "The Journal of Commerce," which says that "the full force of the prohibitory feature of the law falls upon the holding companies that control scattered properties, which are the dominant type in the United States. These would have to dissolve, or, at best, exchange their properties for adjoining operating subsidiaries of other holding concerns."

On the merits of the proposed policy there is, it seems to me, just one argument that needs to be considered carefully. It is whether the diversification of risk through the holding of scattered companies is desirable in order to raise capital for the development of the industry. I should like to see the evidence as to how much of the capital raised for these giant holding companies has actually been invested in power plants and in what other ways they have aided their operating companies to raise funds. Perhaps the evidence has already been submitted. If it has been, I have not happened to see it.

Apart from this, the main problem is, it seems to me, to decide how the surgical operation can be performed with the least loss of blood by all

N. R. A. and Mr. Little, of Texas

By MARK SULLIVAN

THE present article about N. R. A. deals with only one aspect of it, its red tape and delay. In the case here recorded, the citizen made formal application to N. R. A. for the privilege of building a little ice factory designed to make not more than twenty tons of ice a day. The details of the ensuing trail of red tape follow:

December 6, 1934, Mr. Grady Little, of Cameron, Tex., applied to N. R. A. for the privilege of building a twenty-ton-a-day ice factory.

December 28, 1934, Mr. Little received from N. R. A. a form questionnaire for him to fill out. The form covers five large pages—it is about twice as large as an income-tax report, with the bedeviling complexities of which Americans are sadly familiar. Several of the questions call for answers so detailed that the applicant is instructed—I quote:

. . . "Why do you believe you can build up a paying business? Your answer to this question should be fully detailed and accurate. If more space is needed, use additional sheets, typewritten (if possible), notarize and attach to this form."

December 31, 1934, Mr. Little, having filled out the N. R. A. form and made affidavit to it, returned it to N. R. A. headquarters.

January 3, 1935, Mr. Little was informed that a public hearing on his application would be held in Dallas, Tex., on January 10, 1935. (Meantime another form, longer and more complex than the one already mentioned, was required to be filled out, signed and "notarized" by a local Texas N. R. A. official, "chairman of the committee of arbitration and appeal.")

January 10, 1935, public hearing held at Dallas, Tex., by two traveling agents, "field representatives" of N. R. A.

January 18, 1935, transcript of testimony taken at Dallas hearing forwarded to Washington and received by N. R. A. headquarters.

January 21, 1935, transcript of hearing made available to the public.

At the moment when this article is written it is over three months since Mr. Little asked N. R. A. if it would allow him to build a little ice factory at Cameron, Tex. No answer has yet been given him. I understand the preliminary reports are favorable to letting Mr. Little build his factory, but the final N. R. A. authority has not got around to passing on the case. It is now reaching a period of the year in which it is too late to build an ice factory in time for the coming hot season.

Does this throw light on whether N. R. A. promotes business recovery or retards it?

Yet red tape and delay is only a minor aspect of the effect N. R. A. has on industry. The major question is why anybody, anywhere, should be required to ask permission of N. R. A. before he can set up a little factory. In the present case the reason is that the N. R. A. code for ice manufacturing contains the following extraordinary provision—N. R. A. calls it a provision for "control of production"; some ribald persons call it a "birth-control" provision; Senator Borah, Mr. Clarence Darrow and some others call it a "monopoly provision." It reads:

"If at any time an individual, firm, corporation or partnership desires to establish additional ice production . . . said party must first establish to the satisfaction of the administrator that public necessity and convenience require such additional production."

We will be safe, I imagine, in assuming that that provision was written by persons already in the ice manufacturing business, and that the similar restrictive provisions in some forty-three other N. R. A. codes were likewise written by persons already in the respective industries.

Yet young men who act as N. R. A. administrators at Washington solemnly say these provisions are not merely in the interest of those already in the various industries. They say that when they solemnly and judicially decide that an ambitious newcomer must swallow his ambition and not build a factory, they are not acting merely in the interest of those already in the industry. They say they are saving the enterprising one from the consequences of his enterprise. They say that in all cases they survey the field, and only reject the newcomer's application after they have satisfied themselves that there are already enough factories to supply the field. They are saving the enterprising one from himself. That is a part of the New Deal philosophy. It is a "we know best" philosophy, a paternalistic philosophy. It is a queer compound of humanitarianism and pseudo-economics.

But one wonders which of the two really knows best, the young intellectural administering N. R. A. from an office at Washington or the little man in Texas who is willing to back his judgment with some $40,000 of his own money.

I should add that I have talked with Mr. Robert K. Straus, who is administrator of the ice manufacturing code, and with some others of the young men who administer codes. They are high-minded and conscientious. They sincerely believe in the New Deal philosophy, and they strive earnestly to administer the codes both expeditiously and justly, according to their lights. Probably it should also be added that ice manufacturing is an industry that is approaching the border line of classification as a public utility. This cannot be said of the some forty-three other industries in which the codes have "control of production" limitations.

The Juggernaut Skids Against Reapportionment Snags of Assembly

The Democratic juggernaut was being dug out of the legislative mire early this week by slow-motion wrecking crews who sought to replace the somewhat wobbly machine on the speedway leading to adjournment.

Revolt in the Democratic ranks over reapportionment and certain features of the unemployment insurance bill caused the majority party's usually well-oiled vehicle to skid into a law-making ditch and bog down, with road "shoulders" between it and the level stretch.

Again, while the lashing arm of Gov. Lehman has driven through many proposals which, in some instances, he sponsored against the wishes of legislators of his own political faith, there are hundreds of other measures which are aimlessly wandering through the political woods, with no one to guide them. And, with the seasoned G. O. P. in the minority, Republicans are unable to compel action on these bills, while the Democrats seem not to know just what to do about them. April 5th, and even April 12th, are now given as adjournment dates but quien sabe?

REAPPORTIONMENT DUBIOUS

Maxie Baer, ribald heavyweight champion of the world, has a quaint expression he uses to describe pugilists who, over a period of years, "forget to duck." The expression is "Slap-happy!" It beautifully portrays the condition of redistricting which, early this week, awaited resurrection or the coup de grace.

Defeated last week in the Assembly by a vote of 76 to 67, and temporarily blocked in the Senate the day before when Senator Ogden J. Ross, (Dem) of Rensselaer , refused to advance the bill to third reading, the reapportionment proposal appears to be doomed. However, it will probably again come up in the Assembly for another vote, and it received a second test in the Senate Tuesday.

In the interval the Governor is threatening to take his fight for redistricting to the people via the radio, and bigger and better parcels of jobs are being flourished temptingly in front of the Tammany recalcitrants by Farley-Lehman spokesmen. But the odds are against the passage this session, although a special session in the summer, is not altogether impossible if the Governor persists in his present belligerent mood.

CONTRAST

While the Democratic ranks wavered and then broke in the fight over reapportionment, the Republican platoons stood firm. Deciding in caucus that the bill was unconstitutional, and that given population figures were wrong, the G. O. P. representatives under the leadership of Assemblyman Irving M. Ives, Minority Leader, voted in the negative all the way down the line. Former Speaker Joseph A. McGinnies of Ripley, opened the Republican attack on the bill and quietly, mildly, pointed out its incongruities and illegalities.

The Tammany Tiger lost no time in showing its fangs. Using Assemblyman Louis Cuvillier, its veteran and Democratic "whip", as the spearhead of the assault, it delivered ten votes against the measure. Seven Democratic Assemblymen from Manhattan voted "no" with Cuvillier, who first came to the Assembly in 1907. They were joined by Assemblyman Michael F. Breen, Troy Democrat, and Assemblyman Daniel McNamara, Jr., Kings Democrat, and sardonic foe of Republican forefront of the fight against the bill, capitulated unexpectedly, and voted "aye", while Harlem's two negro Assemblymen, James E. Stephens and William T. Andrews, included in the "militant ten," served notice on Democratic Speaker Steingut of a finish fight against the bill.

Sons of "The Sleeping Giant"

Colored folks in Harlem refer to their territory as "The Sleeping Giant." To Stephens and Andrews go the oratorical honors of the reapportionment debate. And the "Sons of the Sleeping Giant" delivered their address against the bill to an Assembly Chamber which became hushed, tense, as they spoke. They said their say in the wake of the race riots in Manhattan's Harlem.

Both men spoke with restrained vigor and passion. Both told how they had pleaded with the Governor, with legislators in their own party, with counsel to the Reapportionment Commission, to give consideration to Harlem's population of 300,000 negroes and thus permit their brooding brethren a colored Senator from a colored district. They were ignored, they charged. Their pleas were scorned. They were gerrymandered and forgotten. They were the victims of a plot based on discrimination, they alleged.

The race riots of last week were mentioned. Both men declared "discrimination, such as is contained in this bill, and the race riots are not unrelated," and they sounded "solemn warning" that if discrimination were to continue, the "end is not in sight." They chided the Democrats for not recognizing Harlem, and compared the gerrymander of Harlem with the "Democratic effort to legislate Joseph Clark Baldwin, 3rd, only Republican from Manhattan in the Senate, out of his job." The speeches were dramatic interludes in an otherwise tedious day.

Unemployment Insurance Hits Snag

Although the Assembly has passed the Unemployment Insurance bill by a vote of 102 to 42, the outcome of the measure was in doubt in the Senate early this week. The rebellion in the Upper House began over a point raised in the Assembly by Minority Leader Ives. The Ives amendment to the job insurance bill, which was lost in the Assembly party vote, was to put back the effective date of the bill until such time as Federal unemployment insurance becomes effective. Mr. Ives declared failure to do this would work injury upon industries located in New York State. Ives made a first-class fighting speech in defense of his amendment which, while defeated, was promptly seized upon by Senate Democrats.

After hours of wrangling by Democratic insurgents in the Upper House, a delegation called on Gov. Lehman and asked him if he would accept an amendment along the general lines originally laid down by Mr. Ives. When the Governor refused, the insurgents sent him an ultimatum which, in effect said, "If the effective date of this State Unemployment Insurance Bill is not put back from Feb. 1st, to March 1st, there will be no bill passed in the Senate." And there the problem stood early this week, along with a brusque Democratic statement that, "The Legislature and not the Governor is responsible for the laws it passes."

Now Famous Bull Once Slated to Block

Steuben Dairymen Organize To Prevent Waste of Wealth.

Fame and fortune for the man, and everlasting glory for the beast, began with the 30 mile hike from Woodhull on November 2, 1916, for James Cochrane of Bath and the now famous Ayrshire bull, Leto.

The story of this bull, which in 1922 was to be pronounced the outstanding sire of the United States, reads like a Horatio Alger narrative.

In the late fall of 1916 information came to Mr. Cochrane of the excellent type and good production of Leto's daughters. He learned too, that the bull had been offered to the butcher by its owner James Guernsey.

The bearer of this information was J. Henry Stewart, pioneer Ayrshire breeder of Kanona. Together these friends hurried to the Guernsey homestead to purchase the animal that Mr. Cochrane later led home.

TRUE TRANSMITTER

Leto proved to be a true transmitter of the two characterisics most prized by livestock breeders type and production. He sired Lilly of Sylvan View, a state show winner and still hale and hearty at 16 yers of age, has a lifetime priduction record of 117,758 lbs. milk nd 4795 lbs of butterfat.

Anothed daughter, Leto's Rosetta made a world's champion record at 3 years of age, still another was Leto's Favorite Betty of Hilltop, a national champion at 4 years.

After doing service in the herds of Messrs. Cochrane and Stewart Leto was sold to the University of Vermont, and there sired Brownie Pet, that recently completed a record of 18,822 lbs. milk at 12 years of age.

In 1922 this splendid beast was selected as the outstanding living sire in the United States and purchased by the Reymann Memorial Farm of West Virginia where he cintinued to do meritorious service until 16 years of age.

BETTER SIRE CAMPAIGN

It is to find and keep in service bulls that transmit high production that the Better Sire Campaign was organized in a county-wide meeting of dairymen called by the Steuben County Farm Bureau on January 19, 1934.

Actual records of 3419 bulls prove that only one bull in three improve the production of the cows to which he is bred. Another third maintain the maternal production and the daughters of more than 30% produce less than their dams.

In proving the ability of bulls by continuous production testing, by keeping good bulls in service, this program aims to reduce the risk and chance of livestock breeding, and thus increase dairy profits.

Three hundred and twenty-five dairymen enrolled in this program in 1934. Registration is now in progress for the current year. Fifteen hundred Steuben County dairymen will soon receive an invitation to join in this constructive program and to receive the service offered without cost or obligation by the farm bureau.

Why Will Will Rogers' Suits Hold Wrinkles

Will Rogers may be the ace o f stage and screen stars, ranking author, and unbeatable columnist.

But he'll never qualify as the "arbiter elegantiarum" of men's fashions. Never will he illustrate what the well-dressed man will wear. For he likes baggy, comfortable, old clothes.

Recently a feminine visitor to the Fox Film studios, during the filming of Will Rogers' latest comedy, "Life begins at 40," was vocally shocked over the stars' appearance. She chided the negligence of Rogers' valet in permitting the star to appear in such a wrinkled suit.

Sterling Holloway, in the cast, overheard. He stepped up and instead of explaining that Rogers believes no man needs more than one blue and one brown suit, said to the critic:

"Mr. Roger employs a valet merely to sleep in his master's clothes. Mr. Rogers wears them during the day. He pays a man to see that they are just as wrinkled in the morning when he puts them on as when he took them off.' '

Holloway bowed solemnly and left a young lady sorely puzzled by this eccentricity.

"Life Begins at 40," will play at the Fox Theatre on Saturday. It was suggested by Walter B. Pitkin's bestseller. Rogers impersonates a droll country editor who gets into a peck of trouble while righting rustic wrongs. It is said to be jammed with laughs.

In one sequence, Rogers is a swine-siren, or more accurately, a hog-caller, and creates pandemonium when several hundred porkers stampede toward him. He later fights a duel and remains cool as a cucumber while bullets clip his hat.

In the supporting cast besides Mr. Holloway are Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell, George Barbier, Jane Darwell, Slim Summerville, Thomas Beck, Roger Imhof, Chas. Sellon, John Bradford and Ruth Gillette.

It is a Sol M. Wurtzel production, directed by George Marshall.

Season of Lent is God's Great Harvest Time, Says the Rev. Jesse Wilson in Sermon

Former Woodhull Pastor Avers That Lent Brings Opportunity to Every Christian to Win Souls to Christ—Season is Most Lovely and Beautiful Because it Is God's Springtime.

A very interesting Lenten meditation has been given by the Rev. Jesse Wilson of Cohocton, former pastor of the Woodhull Methodist church and is passed on to his many Woodhull friends.

We have once more entered upon the "Lenten" season; There is no season of the year that opens up such wonderful opportunities as "Lent" for the pastor and his flock, to cooperate together, and help to bring lost men and women to Jesus Christ."

"It seems to me that "Lent" is God's great harvest time. A spiritual harvest which should be the vision of every pastor and church in God's great moral universe."

I just like to ponder over those wonderful words of Jesus, where he said: "The fields are white already to harvest. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into the harvest."

"Oh what a golden opportunity "Lent" brings to every Christian layman and laywoman in the way of personal evangelism to win at least one soul to Jesus Christ, before Easter."

"Christ's prayer in the garden of Gethsemane the night of his betrayal; "Oh My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me, nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt, and He cometh to his deciples and said unto Peter: 'What could not ye watch with me one hour: Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation, the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak'."

"Then let us watch and pray, let us be up and doing while the day lasts the night cometh when no man can work: 'O what of the "Night" O hasten, O hasten, The King's Business Requires Haste; do not delay, the Master calleth thee."

"There is a time for sowing; there is also a time for reaping in the church of God, and it seems that to me the "Lenten season, is ripe in its opportunities to gather in the golden sheaves for the Master's use.

"It is a season just before the Easter dawn when we are reminded of the resurrection of Jesus.

"The Lenten season is the most fitting of all times and seasons of the year to win new recruits for Jesus Christ, we are not only reminded of all nature bursting forth with new life and power everywhere speaking to us like a voice from the dead, after a long winter's sleep."

"The Lenten season is the most lovely and beautiful of all the year; because it is God's great springtime. The flowers are never more beautiful and their fragrance more sweet, the trees are starting forth their buds, that will bring forth both leaves and blossoms for the fruit in their season.

The birds sing to us their cheery song, telling us that spring has come; all nature then speaks to us of the resurrection: "It is God speaking to man in nature's sphere, and the Lenten season, is not only God's great springtime in nature but God's great harvest time in the spiritual sphere."

I would like to ask you this question? "What after all is the real meaning of "Lent"? Lent is a serious time not to be slighted by those who are Christians, whether they be Catholic or Protestant: "It makes no difference: "You are largely responsible for what is going to happen in your church and community during these Lenten days. Lent is a time when every follower of Jesus Christ should examine himself or herself along spiritual lines, by taking an inventory of all that they possess, that they might see themselves even as God sees them."

Lent is a fit time when every Christian should reconsecrate themselves both body, soul and spirit, letting God have his way with you."

"Let us then during these pre-Easter days exercising a stronger faith in Almighty God, let us spend more time on our knees in earnest prayer and supplication before Him, let us sacrifice more of our time, talents, and money, that He has intrusted to our care as stewards here for a little while, let us have more love for thee, Oh Christ, that our service may be greatly blessed of Thee."

"Who then is there among the laymen or laywomen of our churches who will go to their pastor next Sunday morning service and say with a smile: "Pastor, I am ready to help you and my church in all your pre-Easter services, and personal Evangelism for Christ, here I am, send me, send me, I am ready to help you and my church in this great world-wide program of Evangelism to do my part in heiping to win 1,000,000 souls to Jesus Christ, before the dawn of a new Easter Day, 1935."

Hark the voice of Jesus calling who will go and work today. Fields are white, and harvest waiting, who will bear the sheaves away. Loud and long, the Master calleth; rich reward he offers free; who will answer gladly saying, Here am I, send me, send me.

If you cannot cross the ocean and the heathen lands explore, you can find the heathen nearer, you can help them at your door: "If you iannot give your thousands, you can give the widow's mite, and the least you give to Jesus will be precious in His sight."

Let none hear your idle sayings: "There is nothing I can do, while the souls of men are dying, and the Master calls for you. Take the task He gives you gladly. "Let his work your pleasure be, answer quickly when He calleth, Here I am, send me, send me.

MUSIC POUNDING
Oliver Wendell Holmes

The old master was talking about a concert he had been to hear.

I don't like your chopped music anyway. That woman—she had more sense in her little finger than forty medical societies - Florence Nightingale - says that the music you POUR out is good for sick folks, and the music you POUND out isn't. Not that exactly, but something like it. I have been to hear some music-pounding. It was a young woman, with as many white muslin flounces round her as the planet Saturn has rings, that did it. She gave the music-stool a twirl or two and fluffed down on it like a whirl of soap-suds in a hand-basin. Then she pushed up her cuffs as if she was going to fight for the champion's belt. Then she worked her wrists and her hands to limber 'em, I suppose, and spread out her fingers till they looked as though they would pretty much cover the keyboard, from the growling end to the little squeaky one. Then those two hands of hers made a jump at the keys as if they were a couple of tigers coming down on a flock of black and white sheep, and the piano gave a great howl as if its tail had been trod on. Dead stop—so still you could hear your hair growing. Then another jump and another howl, as if the piano had two tails and you had trod on both of 'em at once, and then a grand clatter and scramble and string of jumps, up and down, like a stampede of rats and mice more than like anything I call music. I like to hear a woman sing and I like to hear a fiddle sing, but these noises they hammer out of their wood-and-ivory anvils—don't talk to me; I know the difference between a bullfrog and a wood-thrush.—The Poet at the Breakfast Table.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

and urged by Boss Farley, the New York Senate has passed the reapportionment measure. The Act will hardly be voted upon in the Assembly again before next week. The measure has little apparent prospect of getting through the Assembly as several Democratic members have combined with Republican to defeat the bill. Those Assemblymen who would lose their seats under the terms of the measure have little relish for voting themselves out of office.

If and when the 4 billion dollar work relief bill gets through Congress, it is expected Harry Hopkins will handle the huge funds.

Hopkins has been conferring with the President and Washington commentators expect he will hold the strings to big gratis money bag, once Congress favors its dispensement. Opinion in the capitol as well as elsewhere in the country, is widely divided as to whether the lavish spending of this enormous sum will have any real effect on the depression.

Improvement Forecast For Dairy Industry

Times are looking better for Steuben County Dairymen according to an announcement by the Farm Bureau Conditions are not satisfactory at present, the bulletin states, but from the standpoint of the future, changes have occurred during the past year which make the outlook for dairying appear the best that it has since 1929.

In mentioning these changes, manager Stemple points out that the number of cows on farms has begun to decline. This is about the first time since 1927 that the number of cows on farms in New York State has been less than the preceding year.

Less Cattle, Supplies

Fewer calves and heifers are being raised and milk production in the United States on January 1 was approximately 10 per cent less than the year previous. Stocks of butter in storage have declined 57 per cent. Evaporated and condensed milk stocks are 26 per cent below a year ago.

Milk and butter prices are higher than during the same month a year earlier. All of these changes in the dairy business point to the fact that the bottom of the dairy business cycle has apparently been reached and that over the next few years, slow recovery can be expected.

There is still one uncertainty which cannot be overlooked, Mr. Stempfle continued. That is on the consumption side of the picture. Consumption of cream and milk in the New York market declined approximately 10 per cent since 1929. The latest reports on the consumption in New York City still show no upturn. Other markets, however,, are beginning to show improvement. As business conditions in the cities pick up, he believes that consumption is bound to rise.

Test Cows for Profit

If the dairy business has passed the low point in the depression, as leading authorities, seem to think, it seems wise for Steuben County dairymen to make the necessary adjustments which will mean greater profits when conditions become more nearly normal.

Many dairymen have recently taken steps to improve their situation in relation to the future by subscribing to the dairy record services of the farm bureau. There are now 96 herds and 1500 cows on test the largest number in the history of Steuben County. The service is available to all dairymen at a very nominal cost. Complete information will be furnished upon request to the farm bureau office.

concerned. Now, the operation is to be done by the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Mr. Kennedy ought, I believe, to be asked by Congress to say whether Section 10 of the bill, as written, can be carried out as efficiently and as safely as the President in his message says it should be. There is no point in failing to learn the lesson of the securities act which is being made workable because Mr. Kennedy and his colleagues are interpreting it. Since Congress wishes to trust Mr. Kennedy with the execution of the policy, it should give him a bill which he believes can be executed.

As to the principle of the thing, the cry that the dissolution of giant holding companies leads to "communism" and "dictatorship" is just stuff and nonsense. It is the very opposite. It is nothing but a revival of old-fashioned, hundred per cent American trust busting applied to the complicated and gigantic trusts of the new era that preceded the New Deal.

The other parts of the bill may conceivably be aimed at eventual nationalization of the power industry. I do not know. I have read them and do not understand them, and nobody seems to be discussing them. But the thing every one is discussing—the dissolution of certain kinds of giant holding companies—is an attempt to recover some of that individualism and economic freedom which we hear so much about. That is why those of us who have disliked mightily the monopolies fostered by N. R. A. and A. A. A. and have looked upon them as leading to the kind of directed and dictated economy which is unsuitable to American conditions must, if we are to be at all consistent, welcome this evidence that Congress and the Administration now believe, as the President put it, that the "destruction of private socialism is utterly essential to avoid governmental socialism."

The spirit of Section 10 is the spirit of American individualism in its original form. It is the spirit of opposition to concentrated power, which, when it is in private hands, is bound to be abused and so to end by becoming concentrated in the hands of the government, where, no doubt, it would also be abused.

Addison Teams Play Over a Hundred Games

(By Maynard Allen)

Many people have wondered if Addison High School was basketball conscious. After looking over Coach Wendell Hewson's score book containing records of about 115 games, probably a record number of games for any Steuben County school team, there is little room for doubt. Seventy-eight of these games were played with teams from other nearby towns, such as Corning, Painted Post, Elkland, Bath, Hornell and other neighboring towns. The remaining 45 games were played between the local teams themselves. The Addison High School Knights played 18 games with visiting teams, 7 in the school circles. The high school girls participated in a total of 15 contests, the same number being chalked up by the Lyres and the combination of the AHS Seconds and Frosh. Finnerty's Aggies have some 20 odd games to their credit and have several more to play. Other teams including the Indians managed to book a dozen or more games.

The varsity games had the biggest attendance they have had in years and the athletic funds swelled accordingly. The basketball season is over but Addison can put good base ball teams on the diamond and expect to do so in 1935 so let's get behind the Knights of the diamond and support them as we did the Knights of the court.

Jasper Athletes To Participate in Alfred Meet

It has recently been announced that, for the first time in history Jasper Central School will send a team to the annual High School track and field meet at Alfred. Hitherto Jasper has never been represented at Alfred although several Jasper athletes have carried Canisteo colors at Alfred and many of them have carried them to victory. Although the squad will be small, it is expected that it will have a high rating of efficiency. The local boys have turned out with enthusiasm and are putting in long hours at practice in their chosen events. Too, the high school baseball team is getting in a little indoor practice in limbering up the old soupbones. Having in mind the glorious record set up by last year's team, the boys are going out with the intentions of upholding their laurels and bringing home another trophy to decorate the halls of Jasper Central. Inasmuch as last year's senior class was composed almost entirely of girls, last year's team is back in full strength and has, in addition the services of Dickie Willover, basketball sensation, who is expected to bolster the team in the outfield. Although no schedule has been released by County headquarters as yet, it is expected that the same teams as competed with Jasper last year will be in the field this year.

Jasper Aces Getting Set For Pennant Chase

The annual business meeting of the Jasper Aces was held last Friday evening. The most important item, the treasurers' report, was very gratifying, inasmuch as a surplus in the treasury was reported. In the usual election of officers, Lyle Whipple was elected team captain for his third successive year. Whipple is very popular with the team and has filled his position very ably. W. E. Bouck was elected secretary-treasurer.

The position of manager was left vacant for the time being, The practice of having a playing manager has been disapproved by the team and several of the more rabid of the local fans are being considered for filling the post. It was decided to complete the final grading of the Aces new diamond as soon as the weather and condition of the ground permit. Although the Aces lost their best pitcher in the form of Robert Drake, now playing with Woodhull, they expect to put a fine team on the diamond this year, and cop the league pennant as they did in 1934.

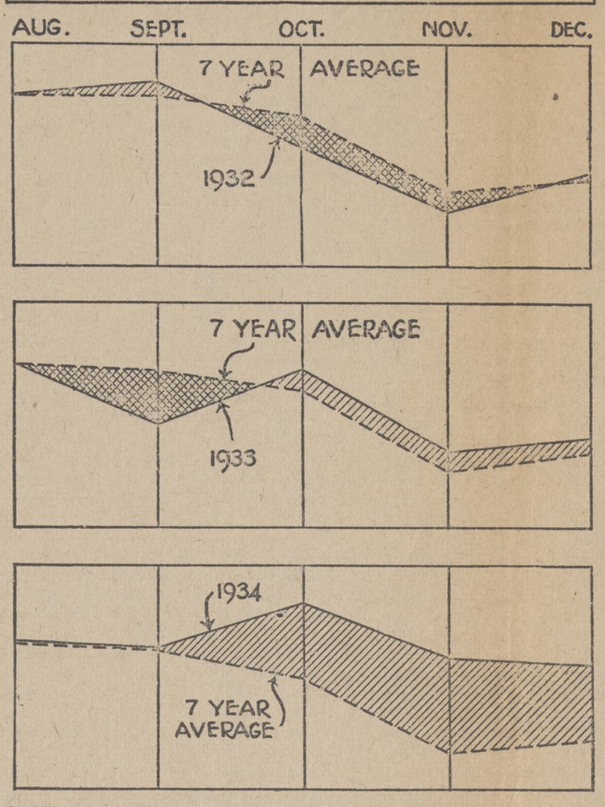
State Milk Campaign Turns Tide



EVIDENCE indicating success of the New York State advertising and educational campaign to increase milk consumption is found in figures of milk receipts in the New York metropolitan area as published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. From these reports statisticians have figured the average trend of milk consumption by months for the period from August through December for the years 1927 to 1933 inclusive. This is represented by the dotted line in the three charts above.

This period was chosen because the State's campaign began in August 1934 and ran through December. The solid lines above represent the actual trend of consumption for the five months period in each year. The average curve or dotted line is projected in each case from the point of actual consumption in the month of August and shows what would have happened had the normal course of events followed through the succeeding four months.

It will be seen that in both 1932 and 1933 the actual figures as recorded were very close to the average curve thus applied, indicating that they followed the normal seasonal decline. The light shaded areas represent recorded gains over the average and the dark shaded areas represent recorded losses under the average. In 1934, however, it is shown that milk receipts in the Metropolitan area held consistently above the projected average curve. The State's advertising campaign was the only new factor to which this net gain can be credited.

League Men Get Advance Payment

Dairymen's League Retires $1,600,000 of Securities Two Years in Advance.

New York, March 24—Immediate retirement of $1,600,000 worth of its Certificates of Indebtedness two years before they become due was announced today by the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc. In addition the Association is now paying off interest coupons on its various series of Certificates due May 1. The interest payments amount to $670,000.

"In an effort to help farmers who have need for cash to buy seeds, fertilizer and equipment for spring work, and thus improve the general business in rural communities we have called for immediate payment at par and interest to May 1 our DD Certificates of Indebtedness," said J. A. Coulter, treasurer of the Association. "This series of Certificates was originally issued to mature May 1, 1937. Our strong capital position enables us to make payments now, so we decided to give holders of the Certificates the benefit of payment two years ahead of maturity date."

The original issue of DD Certificates was for $3,885,000, said the Dairymen's League announcement. More than half of the issue has been retired by purchases made by the Association from holders since 1930. This is the second time that the League has called its securities before they were due. Last year the organization paid off its CC Certificates a year before maturity.

Addison Aggies Win Second Consecutive League Championship

Finnerty's Aggregation Goes Through All Opposition in Future Farmers Circuit Without Loss of a Single Game—Edged Out By All-Star Assemblange at Bath in Non-League Game.

By defeating the Campbell Aggies, which in parts strongly resembled the Campbell High School team, on the Campbell floor Friday night, the Addison Aggies annexed their second straight championship of the Future Farmers League of Steuben County without loss of a single game.

The game started fast with Louck and Mass ringing up baskets for Campbell but Heidrick then drop-in a pair for the Addison boys and from that point on the Addison tossers were never headed. Heidrick played one of the best he has played all year, scoring enough points to defeat the Campbell team single-handed. But the rest of the Aggies were below their usual good form.

The summary:

Campbell Aggies

	G	F	T
Whitney	1	0	2
Sutton	2	2	6
Mass	2	0	4

Hallet	2	0	4
Beers	1	1	3

Total	8	2	20

On Wednesday night the Aggies dropped a close 30-29 battle to a Bath team which was made up of varsity, junior varsity and Ag team players. The inablity of the Addison team to stop "Steve" Ebsary, who scored 16 points, was the principal cause of the locals downfall.

Bath—Ebsary, Dynert, R. McGlynn, Blackman, Minichello, Brown, Erway.

Addison—Heidrick, Hallett, Matthews, Beers, Oakden.

'SHE LEARNED ABOUT SAILORS' OPENS SUNDAY

Alice Faye and Lew Ayres Teamed In "She Learned About Sailors"

Here are five good reasons to see Fox Film's hilarious, comedy-romance, "She learned About Sailors," which opens at the Avon Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

1. Alice Faye, beautiful blonde, playing the role of a smart girl who sings in a night club in an Asiatic Oriental seaport;

2. Lew Ayres, the champion heart-breaker of the U. S. Navy who takes shore leave at this port and falls like a ton of bricks for the fair Faye;

3. Harry Green as Jose Rubenstein, a South American impresario, visiting the same port, who besieges Faye with offers of an engagement in his hotel in South America;

4 and 5. Frank Mitchell and Jack Durant, America's greatest knockabout vaudeville and musical comedy funsters, portraying Lew's sailor buddies. They take it upon themselves to regulate and straighten out the latter's romantic tangles with Alice Faye, thereby causing no end of ludicrous complications.

That's the set-up, and from advance reports from the coast the film is one of the fastest, funniest and gayest films to be released from Hollywood. To add to the hilarious comedy of the story, the film is tinged with spicy and zestful song numbers that promise to be real hits. Alice Faye sings "Here's the Key to My Heart."

George Marshall directed the picture from the screen play by William Conselman and Henry Johnson. Richard Whiting and Sidney Clare wrote the song numbers.
